"What is my life?—an Echo answers—'What?'"

And when she glances at my life and cries, "The Islands of the South, where are they?" and an Echo answers, "Where are they?"

From an Arabic MS.

The above quotation (from which the idea in the text is taken) may be already familiar to every reader—it is given in the first edition page 42, of "The Pleasures of Memory," a poem which I have to be sure a reference almost immediately to which page 42 will be directed to recall.

"And my tongue that echoes men's voices."

MILTON.

For a while the thought of the dead inhabit the form of birds, as if they were in the land. Lord Byron's ghost story, the story of the Baroness of Kildare and George II. has been repeated in the shape of a story in the "Penny Magazine," and many other instances; but this supernatural power seems
The most singular was the case of a Worcester lady, who believing her daughter to exist in the shape of a singing bird, she regularly furnished her with the Cathedral with cages full of the bird; and as she was rich, and a benefactress to the church, no objection was made to her harmless folly. For this see "Milton's Letters."

THE CORSAIR,

A TALE

IN TWO VOLUMES.

BY LORD BYRON.

I dedicate to you the last production with which I shall engage on public papers; and your indulgence in reading it will be one that I feel anxious to stand myself of the highest and only opportunity of obtaining my name with a name, connected by undoubted public principle, and the most undoubted and various talent. While I feel that I am among the number of my countrymen—while you stand alone the first of the world in letters—
I feel that I am among the first of the world in letters.

TO
THOMAS MOORE, ESQ.

MY DEAR MOORE,

I DEDICATE to you the last production with which I shall trespass on public patience, and your indulgence, for some years ; and I own that I feel anxious to avail myself of this latest and only opportunity of adorning my pages with a name, consecrated by unshaken public principle, and the most undoubted and various talents. While Ireland ranks you among the firmest of her patriots—while you stand alone the first of her bards in her estimation, and Britain repeats and ratifies the decree—permit one, whose only regret, since our first acquaintance, has been the years he had lost before it commenced, to add the humble, but sincere suffrage of friendship, to the voice of more than one nation. It will at least prove to you, that I have neither forgotten the gratification derived from your society, nor abandoned the prospect of its renewal, whenever your leisure or inclination allows you to atone to your friends for too long an absence. It is said among those friends, I trust truly, that you are engaged in the composition of a poem whose scene will be laid in the East; none can do those scenes so much justice. The wrongs of your own country, the magnificent and fiery spirit of her sons, the beauty and feeling of her daughters, may there be found; and Collins, when he denominated his Oriental, his Irish Eclogues, was not aware how true, at least, was a part of his parallel. Your imagination will create a warmer sun, and less clouded sky; but wildness, tenderness, and originality are part of your national claim of oriental descent, to which you have already thus far proved your title more clearly than the most zealous of your country's antiquarians. May I add a few words on a subject on which all men are supposed to be fluent, and none agreeable?—Self. I have written much, and published more than enough to demand a longer silence than I now meditate; but for some years to come it is my intention to tempt no further the award of “Gods, men, nor columns.” In the present composition I have attempted not the most difficult, but, perhaps, the best adapted measure to our language, the good old and now neglected heroic couplet:—the stanza of Spenser is perhaps too slow and dignified for narrative; though, I confess, it is the measure most after my own heart; and Scott alone, of the present generation, has hitherto completely triumphed over the fatal facility of the octo-syllabic verse; and this is not the least victory of his fertile and mighty genius. In blank verse, Milton, Thomson, and our dramatists, are the beacons that shine along the deep, but warn us from the rough and barren rock on which they are kindled. The heroic couplet is not the most popular measure certainly; but as I did not deviate into the other from a wish to flatter what is called public opinion, I shall quit it without further apology, and take my chance once more with that versification, in which I have hitherto published nothing but compositions whose former circulation is part of my present and will be of my future regret.

With regard to my story, and stories in general, I should have been glad to have rendered my personages more perfect and amiable, if possible, inasmuch as I have been sometimes criticised, and considered no less responsible for their deeds and qualities than if all had been personal. Be it so—if I have deviated into the gloomy vanity of “drawing from self,” the pictures are probably like, since they are unfavourable; and if not, those who know me are undeceived, and those who do not, I have little interest in undeceiving.

I have no particular desire that any but my acquaintance should think the author better than the beings of his imagining; but I cannot help a little surprise, and perhaps amusement, at some odd critical exceptions in the present instance, when I see several bards (far more deserving, I allow) in very reputable plight, and quite exempted from all participation in the faults of those heroes, who, nevertheless, might be found with little more morality than "The Giaour," and perhaps—but no—I must admit Childe Harold to be a very repulsive personage; and as to his identity, those who like it must give him whatever "alias" they please.

If, however, it were worth while to remove the impression, it might be of some service to me, that the man who is alike the delight of his readers and his friends—the poet of all circles—and the idol of his own, permits me here and elsewhere to subscribe myself,

CANTO I.

“ _____ nessun maggior dolore,

“ Nella miseria, _____ ”

DANTE.

I.

“ O’ER the glad waters of the dark blue sea,
“ Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls as free,
“ Far as the breeze can bear, the billows foam,
“ Survey our empire and behold our home !
“ These are our realms, no limits to their sway—
“ Our flag the sceptre all who meet obey.
“ Ours the wild life in tumult still to range
“ From toil to rest, and joy in every change.
“ Oh, who can tell? not thou, luxurious slave !
“ Whose soul would sicken o’er the heaving wave ; 10

- “ Not thou, vain lord of wantonness and ease !
“ Whom slumber soothes not—pleasure cannot please—
“ Oh, who can tell, save he whose heart hath tried,
“ And danc’d in triumph o’er the waters wide,
“ The exulting sense—the pulse’s maddening play,
“ That thrills the wanderer of that trackless way ?
“ That for itself can woo the approaching fight,
“ And turn what some deem danger to delight ;
“ That seeks what cravens shun with more than zeal,
“ And where the feeble faint—can only feel— 20
“ Feel—to the rising bosom’s inmost core,
“ Its hope awaken and its spirit soar ?
“ No dread of death—if with us die our foes—
“ Save that it seems even duller than repose :
“ Come when it will—we snatch the life of life—
“ When lost—what recks it—by disease or strife ?
“ Let him who crawls enamoured of decay,
“ Cling to his couch, and sicken years away ;
“ Heave his thick breath ; and shake his palsied head ;
“ Ours—the fresh turf, and not the feverish bed. 30
“ While gasp by gasp he falters forth his soul,
“ Ours with one pang—one bound—escapes controul.

“ His corse may boast it's urn and narrow cave,
“ And they who loath'd his life may gild his grave :
“ Ours are the tears, though few, sincerely shed,
“ When Ocean shrouds and sepulchres our dead.
“ For us, even banquets fond regret supply
“ In the red cup that crowns our memory ;
“ And the brief epitaph in danger's day,
“ When those who win at length divide the prey, 40
“ And cry, Remembrance saddening o'er each brow,
“ How had the brave who fell exulted now !”

II.

Such were the notes that from the Pirate's isle,
Around the kindling watch-fire rang the while ;
Such were the sounds that thrill'd the rocks along,
And unto ears as rugged seem'd a song !
In scattered groups upon the golden sand,
They game—carouse—converse—or whet the brand ;
Select the arms—to each his blade assign,
And careless eye the blood that dims its shine : 50
Repair the boat—replace the helm or oar,
While others straggling muse along the shore ;

For the wild bird the busy springes set,
Or spread beneath the sun the dripping net :
Gaze where some distant sail a speck supplies,
With all the thirsting eye of Enterprize—
Tell o'er the tales of many a night of toil,
And marvel where they next shall seize a spoil :
No matter where—their chief's allotment this—
Theirs—to believe no prey nor plan amiss. 60
But who that CHIEF? his name on every shore
Is famed and fear'd—they ask and know no more.
With these he mingles not but to command—
Few are his words, but keen his eye and hand.
Ne'er seasons he with mirth their jovial mess,
But they forgive his silence for success.
Ne'er for his lip the purpling cup they fill,
That goblet passes him untasted still—
And for his fare—the rudest of his crew
Would that, in turn, have pass'd untasted too ; 70
Earth's coarsest bread, the garden's homeliest roots,
And scarce the summer luxury of fruits,
His short repast in humbleness supply
With all a hermit's board would scarce deny.

But while he shuns the grosser joys of sense,
 His mind seems nourish'd by that abstinence.
 "Steer to that shore!"—they sail. "Do this!"—'tis done:
 "Now form and follow me!"—the spoil is won.
 Thus prompt his accents and his actions still,
 And all obey and few enquire his will;
 To such, brief answer and contemptuous eye
 Convey reproof, nor further deign reply.

III.

"A sail!—a sail!"—a promised prize to Hope!
 Her nation—flag—how speaks the telescope?
 No prize, alas!—but yet a welcome sail:
 The blood-red signal glitters in the gale.
 Yes—she is our's—a home returning bark—
 Blow fair, thou breeze!—she anchors ere the dark.
 Already doubled is the cape—our bay
 Receives that prow which proudly spurns the spray;
 How gloriously her gallant course she goes!
 Her white wings flying—never from her foes.
 She walks the waters like a thing of life,
 And seems to dare the elements to strife—

Who would not brave the battle-fire—the wreck—
To move the monarch of her peopled deck?

IV.

Hoarse o'er her side the rustling cable rings;
The sails are furl'd; and anchoring round she swings:
And gathering loiterers on the land discern
Her boat descending from the latticed stern. 100
'Tis mann'd—the oars keep concert to the strand,
Till grates her keel upon the shallow sand.
Hail to the welcome shout!—the friendly speech!
When hand grasps hand uniting on the beach;
The smile, the question, and the quick reply,
And the heart's promise of festivity!

V.

The tidings spread—and gathering grows the crowd:
The hum of voices—and the laughter loud,
And woman's gentler anxious tone is heard— 109
Friends'—husbands'—lovers' names in each dear word.
“ Oh! are they safe? we ask not of success—
“ But shall we see them? will their accents bless?

“ From where the battle roars—the billows chafe—

“ They doubtless boldly did—but who are safe?

“ Here let them haste to gladden and surprize,

“ And kiss the doubt from these delighted eyes!”

VI.

“ Where is our chief? for him we bear report—

“ And doubt that joy—which hails our coming—short,

“ Yet thus sincere—’tis cheering, though so brief;

“ But, Juan! instant guide us to our chief: 120

“ Our greeting paid, we’ll feast on our return,

“ And all shall hear what each may wish to learn.”

Ascending slowly by the rock-hewn way,

To where his watch-tower beetles o’er the bay,

By bushy brake, and wild flowers blossoming,

And freshness breathing from each silver spring,

Whose scattered streams from granite basins burst,

Leap into life, and sparkling woo your thirst;

From crag to cliff they mount—Near yonder cave,

What lonely straggler looks along the wave? 130

In pensive posture leaning on the brand,

Not oft a resting-staff to that red hand?

" 'Tis he—'tis Conrad—here—as wont—alone,
" On—Juan! on—and make our purpose known.
" The bark he views—and tell him we would greet
" His ear with tidings he must quickly meet:
" We dare not yet approach—thou know'st his mood,
" When strange or uninvited steps intrude."

VII.

Him Juan sought, and told of their intent—
He spake not—but a sign express'd assent. 140
These Juan calls—they come—to their salute
He bends him slightly, but his lips are mute.
" These letters, chief, are from the Greek—the spy—
" Who still proclaims our spoil or peril nigh;
" Whate'er his tidings, we can well report,
" Much that"—"Peace, peace!"—he cuts their prating short.
Wondering they turn—abashed—while each to each
Conjecture whispers in his muttering speech:
They watch his glance with many a stealing look,
To gather how that eye the tidings took; 150
But—this as if he guess'd—with head aside—
Perchance from some emotion—doubt, or pride—

He read the scroll—" My tablets, Juan, hark—

" Where is Gonsalvo?"

" In the anchored bark."

" There let him stay—to him this order bear.

" Back to your duty—for my course prepare :

" Myself this enterprize to-night will share."

" To-night, Lord Conrad?"

" Ay! at set of sun : 160

" The breeze will freshen when the day is done.

" My corslet—cloak—one hour—and we are gone.

" Sling on thy bugle—see that free from rust,

" My carbine-lock springs worthy of my trust ;

" Be the edge sharpen'd of my boarding-brand,

" And give it's guard more room to fit my hand.

" This let the Armourer with speed dispose ;

" Last time—it more fatigued my arm than foes :

" Mark that the signal-gun be duly fired,

" To tell us when the hour of stay's expired." 170

VIII.

They make obeisance, and retire in haste,
Too soon to seek again the watery waste :
Yet they repine not—so that Conrad guides,
And who dare question aught that he decides ?
That man of loneliness and mystery,
Scarce seen to smile, and seldom heard to sigh—
Whose name appals the fiercest of his crew,
And tints each swarthy cheek with sallower hue ;
Still sways their souls with that commanding art
That dazzles—leads—yet chills the vulgar heart. 180
What is that spell, that thus his lawless train
Confess and envy—yet oppose in vain ?
What should it be ? that thus their faith can bind ?
The power of Thought—the magic of the Mind !
Linked with success—assumed and kept with skill,
That moulds another's weakness to it's will—
Wields with their hands—but still to these unknown,
Makes even their mightiest deeds appear his own.
Such hath it been—shall be—beneath the sun
The many still must labour for the one ; 190
'Tis Nature's doom—but let the wretch who toils,
Accuse not—hate not—him who wears the spoils.

Oh ! if he knew the weight of splendid chains,
How light the balance of his humbler pains !

IX.

Unlike the heroes of each ancient race,
Demons in act, but Gods at least in face,
In Conrad's form seems little to admire,
Though his dark eye-brow shades a glance of fire :
Robust but not Herculean—to the sight
No giant frame sets forth his common height ; 200
Yet in the whole—who paused to look again,
Saw more than marks the crowd of vulgar men—
They gaze and marvel how—and still confess
That thus it is, but why they cannot guess.
Sun-burnt his cheek—his forehead high and pale,—
The sable curls in wild profusion veil ;
And oft perforce his rising lip reveals
The haughtier thought it curbs, but scarce conceals.
Though smooth his voice, and calm his general mien,
Still seems there something he would not have seen : 210
His features' deepening lines and varying hue,
At times attracted, yet perplex'd the view,

As if within that murkiness of mind
Work'd feelings fearful, and yet undefined ;
Such might it be—that none could truly tell—
Too close enquiry his stern glance would quell.
There breathe but few whose aspect might defy
The full encounter of his searching eye ;—
He had the skill, when Cunning's gaze would seek
To probe his heart and watch his changing cheek, 220
At once the observer's purpose to espy,
And on himself roll back his scrutiny,
Lest he to Conrad rather should betray
Some secret thought—than drag that chief's to day.
There was a laughing Devil in his sneer,
That raised emotions both of rage and fear ;
And where his frown of hatred darkly fell,
Hope withering fled—and Mercy sighed farewell!

X.

Slight are the outward signs of evil thought,
Within—within—'twas there the spirit wrought! 230
Love shows all changes—Hate, Ambition, Guile,
Betray no further than the bitter smile;

The lip's least curl, the lightest paleness thrown
Along the govern'd aspect, speak alone
Of deeper passions; and to judge their mien,
He, who would see, must be himself unseen.
Then—with the hurried tread, the upward eye,
The clenched hand, the pause of agony,
That listens, starting, lest the step too near Approach intrusive on that mood of fear: 240
Then—with each feature working from the heart,
With feelings loosed to strengthen—not depart—
That rise—convulse—contend—that freeze, or glow,
Flush in the cheek, or damp upon the brow,
Then—Stranger! if thou canst, and tremblest not,
Behold his soul—the rest that soothes his lot!
Mark—how that lone and blighted bosom sears
The scathing thought of execrated years!
Behold—but who hath seen, or e'er shall see,
Man as himself—the secret spirit free? 250

XI.

Yet was not Conrad thus by Nature sent
To lead the guilty—guilt's worst instrument—

His soul was changed—before his deeds had driven
Him forth to war with man and forfeit heaven.
Warp'd by the world in Disappointment's school,
In words too wise—in conduct there a fool—
Too firm to yield—and far too proud to stoop—
Doom'd by his very virtues for a dupe,
He curs'd those virtues as the cause of ill,
And not the traitors who betrayed him still; 260
Nor deem'd that gifts bestowed on better men
Had left him joy, and means to give again.
Fear'd—shunn'd—belied—ere youth had lost her force,
He hated man too much to feel remorse—
And thought the voice of wrath a sacred call,
To pay the injuries of some on all.
He knew himself a villain—but he deem'd
The rest no better than the thing he seem'd;
And scorn'd the best as hypocrites who hid
Those deeds the bolder spirit plainly did. 270
He knew himself detested, but he knew
The hearts that loath'd him crouch'd and dreaded too.
Lone, wild, and strange, he stood alike exempt
From all affection and from all contempt:

His name could sadden, and his acts surprize ;
But they that fear'd him dared not to despise :
Man spurns the worm, but pauses ere he wake
The slumbering venom of the folded snake :
The first may turn—but not avenge the blow ;
The last expires—but leaves no living foe—
Fast to the doomed offender's form it clings—
And he may crush—not conquer—still it stings !

XII.

None are all evil—clinging round his heart,
One softer feeling would not yet depart ; 280
Oft could he sneer at others as beguil'd
By passions worthy of a fool or child—
Yet 'gainst that passion vainly still he strove,
And even in him it asks the name of Love !
Yes, it was love—unchangeable—unchanged—
Felt but for one from whom he never ranged ;
Though fairest captives daily met his eye,
He shunn'd, nor sought, but coldly pass'd them by ;
Though many a beauty droop'd in prison'd bower,
None ever sooth'd his most unguarded hour. 290
Yes—it was Love—if thoughts of tenderness,
Tried in temptation, strengthen'd by distress,

His soul was changed—before his deeds had driven
Him forth to war with man and forfeit heaven.
Warp'd by the world in Disappointment's school,
In words too wise—in conduct there a fool—

Yes—it was Love—if thoughts of tenderness,
Tried in temptation, strengthen'd by distress,

Unmoved by absence, firm in every clime,
And yet—Oh more than all!—untired by time—
Which nor defeated hope, nor baffled wile,
Could render sullen were she near to smile,
Nor rage could fire, nor sickness fret to vent
On her one murmur of his discontent—
Which still would meet with joy, with calmness part,
Lest that his look of grief should reach her heart ; 300
Which nought remov'd—nor menaced to remove—
If there be love in mortals—this was love!
He was a villain—aye—reproaches shower
On him—but not the passion, nor its power,
Which only proved, all other virtues gone,
Not guilt itself could quench this loveliest one!

XIII.

He paused a moment—till his hastening men
Pass'd the first winding downward to the glen.
“ Strange tidings!—many a peril have I past,
“ Nor know I why this next appears the last! 310
“ Yet so my heart forebodes, but must not fear,
“ Nor shall my followers find me falter here.
“ 'Tis rash to meet—but surer death to wait—
“ Till here they hunt us to undoubted fate,

- “ And, if my plan but hold, and Fortune smile, “ We’ll furnish mourners for our funeral-pile.
“ Ay—let them slumber—peaceful be their dreams!
“ Morn ne’er awoke them with such brilliant beams
“ As kindle high to-night (but blow, thou breeze!)
“ To warm these slow avengers of the seas. 320
“ Now to Medora—Oh! my sinking heart,
“ Long may her own be lighter than thou art!
“ Yet was I brave—mean boast! where all are brave—
“ Ev’n insects sting for aught they seek to save—
“ This common courage which with brutes we share,
“ That owes its deadliest efforts to despair,
“ Small merit claims—but ’twas my nobler hope
“ To teach my few with numbers still to cope;
“ Long have I led them—not to vainly bleed:
“ No medium now—we perish or succeed! 330
“ So let it be—it irks not me to die;
“ But thus to urge them whence they cannot fly—
“ My lot hath long had little of my care,
“ But chafes my pride thus baffled in the snare:
“ Is this my skill? my craft? to set at last
“ Hope, power, and life upon a single cast?

“ Oh, Fate!—accuse thy folly, not thy fate—

“ She may redeem thee still—nor yet too late.”

XIV.

Thus with himself communion held he—till

He reach'd the summit of his tower-crown'd hill: 340

There at the portal paus'd—for wild and soft

He heard those accents never heard too oft;

Through the high lattice far yet sweet they rung,

And these the notes his bird of beauty sung:

“ Deep in my soul that tender secret dwells,

Lonely and lost to light for evermore,

Save when to thine my heart responsive swells,

Then trembles into silence as before.

“ There in its centre—a sepulchral lamp

Burns the slow flame eternal—but unseen; 350

Which not the darkness of despair can damp,

Though vain its ray as it had never been.

3.

“Remember me—Oh! pass not thou my grave
 Without one thought whose relics there recline:
 The only pang my bosom dare not brave,
 Must be to find forgetfulness in thine.

“My fondest—faintest—latest—accents hear:
 Grief for the dead not Virtue can reprove;
 Then give me all I ever asked—a tear,
 The first—last—sole reward of so much love!” 360

He pass'd the portal—cross'd the corridore,
 And reach'd the chamber as the strain gave o'er:
 “My own Medora—sure thy song is sad—”

“In Conrad's absence wouldst thou have it glad?
 “Without thine ear to listen to my lay,
 “Still must my song my thoughts, my soul betray:
 “Still must each accent to my bosom suit,
 “My heart unhush'd—although my lips were mute!
 “Oh! many a night on this lone couch reclin'd, 369
 “My dreaming fear with storms hath wing'd the wind,

“ And deem’d the breath that faintly fann’d thy sail—
“ The murmuring prelude of the ruder gale ;
“ Though soft—it seem’d the low prophetic dirge,
“ That mourn’d thee floating on the savage surge :
“ Still would I rise—to rouse the beacon fire,
“ Lest spies less true should let the blaze expire ;
“ And many a restless hour outwatch’d each star,
“ And morning came—and still thou wert afar.
“ Oh! how the chill blast on my bosom blew,
“ And day broke dreary on my troubled view, 380
“ And still I gazed and gazed—and not a prow
“ Was granted to my tears—my truth—my vow !
“ At length—’twas noon—I hail’d and blest the mast
“ That met my sight—it near’d—Alas! it past!
“ Another came—Oh God! ’twas thine at last!
“ Would that those days were over! wilt thou ne’er,
“ My Conrad! learn the joys of peace to share?
“ Sure thou hast more than wealth—and many a home
“ As bright as this invites us not to roam :
“ Thou know’st it is not peril that I fear, 390
“ I only tremble when thou art not here ;
“ Then not for mine—but that far dearer life,
“ Which flies from love and languishes for strife—

“ How strange that heart, to me so tender still,

“ Should war with nature and its better will ! ”

“ Yea, strange indeed—that heart hath long been changed,

“ Worm-like ’twas trampled—adder-like avenged,

“ Without one hope on earth beyond thy love,

“ And scarce a glimpse of mercy from above.

“ Yet the same feeling which thou dost condemn, 400

“ My very love to thee is hate to them,

“ So closely mingling here, that disentwin’d,

“ I cease to love thee when I love mankind :

“ Yet dread not this—the proof of all the past

“ Assures the future that my love will last ;

“ But— Oh, Medora ! nerve thy gentler heart,

“ This hour again—but not for long—we part.”

“ This hour we part !—my heart foreboded this.

“ Thus ever fade my fairy dreams of bliss—

“ This hour—it cannot be—this hour away ! 410

“ Yon bark hath hardly anchored in the bay.

“ Her consort still is absent—and her crew

“ Have need of rest before they toil anew ;

- “ My love! thou mock’st my weakness; and would’st steel
“ My breast before the time when it must feel.
“ But trifle now no more with my distress,
“ Such mirth hath less of play than bitterness :
“ Be silent,—Conrad!—dearest—come and share
“ The feast these hands delighted to prepare—
“ Light toil! to cull and dress thy frugal fare! 420
“ See, I have pluck’d the fruit that promised best,
“ And where not sure, perplex’d, but pleased, I guess’d
“ At such as seem’d the fairest: thrice the hill
“ My steps have wound to try the coolest rill;
“ Yes! thy Sherbet to-night will sweetly flow,
“ See how it sparkles in its vase of snow!
“ The grapes’ gay juice thy bosom never cheers—
“ Thou—more than Moslem—when the cup appears—
“ Think not I mean to chide—for I rejoice
“ What others deem a penance is thy choice. 430
“ But come—the board is spread—our silver lamp
“ Is trimm’d, and heeds not the Sirocco’s damp:
“ Then shall my handmaids while the time along,
“ And join with me the dance, or wake the song;
“ Or my guitar, which still thou lov’st to hear,
“ Shall soothe or lull—or, should it vex thine ear,

- “ We’ll turn the tale, by Ariosto told,
“ Of fair Olympia lov’d and left of old.¹
“ Why—thou wert worse than he who broke his vow
“ To that lost damsel, shouldst thou leave me now ; 440
“ Or even that traitor chief—I’ve seen thee smile,
“ When the clear sky showed Ariadne’s Isle,
“ Which I have pointed from these cliffs the while :
“ And thus—half sportive—half in fear—I said,
“ Lest Time should raise that doubt to more than dread,
“ Thus Conrad, too, will quit me for the main :
“ And he deceiv’d me—for—he came again !”
“ Again—again—and oft again—my love !
“ If there be life below, and hope above,
“ He will return—but now—the moments bring 450
“ The time of parting with redoubled wing :
“ The why—the where—what boots it now to tell ?
“ Since all must end in that wild word—farewell !
“ Yet would I fain—did time allow—disclose—
“ Fear not—these are no formidable foes ;
“ And here shall watch a more than wonted guard,
“ For sudden siege and long defence prepar’d :

“ Nor be thou lonely—though thy lord’s away,
“ Our matrons and thy handmaids with thee stay;
“ And this thy comfort—that, when next we meet, 460
“ Security shall make repose more sweet:
“ List!—’tis the bugle—Juan shrilly blew—
“ One kiss—one more—another—Oh! Adieu!”

She rose—she sprung—she clung to his embrace,
Till his heart heaved beneath her hidden face.
He dared not raise to his that deep-blue eye,
That downcast droop’d in tearless agony.
Her long fair hair lay floating o’er his arms,
In all the wildness of dishevelled charms;
Scarce beat that bosom—where his image dwelt— 470
So full—that feeling seem’d almost unfelt!
Hark—peals the thunder of the signal-gun!
It told ’twas sunset—and he curs’d that sun.
Again—again—that form he madly press’d,
Which mutely clasp’d—imploringly caress’d!
And tottering to the couch his bride he bore,
One moment gazed—as if to gaze no more—
Felt—that for him earth held but her alone,
Kiss’d her cold forehead—turn’d—is Conrad gone?

XV.

“ And is he gone ? ”—on sudden solitude 480

How oft that fearful question will intrude ?

“ ’Twas but an instant past—and here he stood !

“ And now ”—without the portal’s porch she rush’d—

And then at length her tears in freedom gush’d,

Big—bright—and fast, unknown to her they fell ;

But still her lips refus’d to send—“ Farewell ! ”

For in that word—that fatal word—howe’er

We promise—hope—believe—there breathes despair.

O’er every feature of that still, pale face,

Had sorrow fix’d what time can ne’er erase : 490

The tender blue of that large loving eye

Grew frozen with its gaze on vacancy—

Till—Oh, how far ! it caught a glimpse of him—

And then it flow’d—and phrenzied seem’d to swim

Through those long, dark, and glistening lashes dew’d

With drops of sadness oft to be renew’d.

“ He’s gone ! ”—against her heart that hand is driven,

Convuls’d and quick—then gently raised to heaven ;

She look’d and saw the heaving of the main ;

The white sail set—she dared not look again ; 500

“ And deem’d the breath that faintly fann’d thy sail—
“ The murmuring prelude of the ruder gale ;
“ Though soft—it seem’d the low prophetic dirge,
“ That mourn’d thee floating on the savage surge :
“ Still would I rise—to rouse the beacon fire,
“ Lest spies less true should let the blaze expire ;
“ And many a restless hour outwatch’d each star,
“ And morning came—and still thou wert afar.
“ Oh! how the chill blast on my bosom blew,
“ And day broke dreary on my troubled view, 380
“ And still I gazed and gazed—and not a prow
“ Was granted to my tears—my truth—my vow !
“ At length—’twas noon—I hail’d and blest the mast
“ That met my sight—it near’d—Alas! it past!
“ Another came—Oh God! ’twas thine at last!
“ Would that those days were over! wilt thou ne’er,
“ My Conrad! learn the joys of peace to share?
“ Sure thou hast more than wealth—and many a home
“ As bright as this invites us not to roam :
“ Thou know’st it is not peril that I fear, 390
“ I only tremble when thou art not here ;
“ Then not for mine—but that far dearer life,
“ Which flies from love and languishes for strife—

“ How strange that heart, to me so tender still,

“ Should war with nature and its better will !”

“ Yea, strange indeed—that heart hath long been changed,

“ Worm-like ’twas trampled—adder-like avenged,

“ Without one hope on earth beyond thy love,

“ And scarce a glimpse of mercy from above.

“ Yet the same feeling which thou dost condemn, 400

“ My very love to thee is hate to them,

“ So closely mingling here, that disentwin’d,

“ I cease to love thee when I love mankind :

“ Yet dread not this—the proof of all the past

“ Assures the future that my love will last ;

“ But— Oh, Medora ! nerve thy gentler heart,

“ This hour again—but not for long—we part.”

“ This hour we part !—my heart foreboded this.

“ Thus ever fade my fairy dreams of bliss—

“ This hour—it cannot be—this hour away ! 410

“ Yon bark hath hardly anchored in the bay.

“ Her consort still is absent—and her crew

“ Have need of rest before they toil anew ;

- “ My love! thou mock’st my weakness; and would’st steel
“ My breast before the time when it must feel.

Convuls’d and quick—then gently raised to heaven ;

She look’d and saw the heaving of the main ;

The white sail set—she dared not look again ; 500

But turn'd with sickening soul within the gate—

“ It is no dream—and I am desolate!”

XVI.

From crag to crag descending—swiftly sped

Stern Conrad down, nor once he turn'd his head ;

But shrunk whene'er the windings of his way

Forced on his eye what he would not survey—

His lone, but lovely dwelling on the steep,

That hailed him first when homeward from the deep :

And she—the dim and melancholy star,

Whose ray of beauty reach'd him from afar, 510

On her he must not gaze, he must not think,

There he might rest—but on Destruction's brink—

Yet once almost he stopp'd—and nearly gave

His fate to chance, his projects to the wave ;

But no—it must not be—a worthy chief

May melt, but not betray to woman's grief.

He sees his bark, he notes how fair the wind,

And sternly gathers all his might of mind :

Again he hurries on—and as he hears

The clang of tumult vibrate on his ears, 520

The busy sounds, the bustle of the shore,
The shout, the signal, and the dashing oar—
As marks his eye the seaboy on the mast,
The anchor's rise, the sails unfurling fast,
The waving kerchiefs of the crowd that urge
That mute adieu to those who stem the surge;
And more than all—his blood-red flag aloft—
He marvell'd how his heart could seem so soft.
Fire in his glance, and wildness in his breast,
He feels of all his former self possest; 530
He bounds—he flies—until his footsteps reach
The verge where ends the cliff, begins the beach,
There checks his speed; but pauses less to breathe
The breezy freshness of the deep beneath,
Than there his wonted statelier step renew;
Nor rush, disturb'd by haste, to vulgar view:
For well had Conrad learn'd to curb the crowd,
By arts that veil, and oft preserve the proud;
His was the lofty port, the distant mien,
That seems to shun the sight—and awes if seen: 540
The solemn aspect, and the high-born eye,
That checks low mirth, but lacks not courtesy;

All these he wielded to command assent—
 But where he wished to win, so well unbent,
 That kindness cancell'd fear in those who heard,
 And other's gifts shewed mean beside his word—
 When echoed to the heart as from his own,
 His deep yet tender melody of tone :
 But such was foreign to his wonted mood,
 He cared not what he soften'd—but subdued ;— 550
 The evil passions of his youth had made
 Him value less who loved—than what obeyed.

XVII.

Around him mustering ranged his ready guard.
 Before him Juan stands—"Are all prepared?"
 "They are—nay more—embarked: the latest boat
 "Waits but my chief——"
 "My sword, and my capote."
 Soon firmly girded on, and lightly slung,
 His belt and cloak were o'er his shoulders flung;
 "Call Pedro here!" He comes—and Conrad bends,
 With all the courtesy he deign'd his friends ; 560

“ Receive these tablets, and peruse with care,
“ Words of high trust, and truth are graven there;
“ Double the guard, and when Anselmo’s bark
“ Arrives, let him alike these orders mark :
“ In three days (serve the breeze) the sun shall shine
“ On our return—till then all peace be thine !”
This said, his brother Pirate’s hand he wrung,
Then to his boat with haughty gesture sprung.
Flash’d the dipt oars, and sparkling with the stroke,
Around the waves’ phosphoric² brightness broke ; 570
They gain the vessel—on the deck he stands.
Shrieks the shrill whistle—ply the busy hands—
He marks how well the ship her helm obeys,
How gallant all her crew—and deigns to praise.
His eyes of pride to young Gonsalvo turn ;
Why doth he start, and inly seem to mourn ?
Alas ! those eyes beheld his rocky tower,
And live a moment o’er the parting hour ;
She—his Medora—did she mark the prow ?
Ah ! never loved he half so much as now ! 580
But much must yet be done ere dawn of day.
Again he mans himself and turns away ;

Down to the cabin with Gonsalvo bends,
And there unfolds his plan—his means—and ends;
Before them burns the lamp, and spreads the chart,
And all that speaks and aids the naval art;
They to the midnight watch protract debate—
To anxious eyes what hour is ever late?
Mean time, the steady breeze serenely blew,
And fast and Falcon-like the vessel flew; 590
Pass'd the high headlands of each clustering isle,
To gain their port—long—long ere morning smile:
And soon the night-glass through the narrow bay
Discovers where the Pacha's galleys lay.
Count they each sail—and mark how there supine
The lights in vain o'er heedless Moslem shine;
Secure—unnoted—Conrad's prow pass'd by,
And anchor'd where his ambush meant to lie;
Screen'd from espial by the jutting cape,
That rears on high its rude fantastic shape. 600
Then rose his band to duty—not from sleep—
Equipp'd for deeds alike on land or deep;
While lean'd their leader o'er the fretting flood,
And calmly talk'd—and yet he talk'd of blood!

END OF CANTO I.

CANTO II.

“ Conosceste i dubiosi desiri ? ”

DANTE.

I.

IN Coron's bay floats many a Galley light,
Through Coron's lattices the lamps are bright,
For Seyd, the Pacha, makes a feast to-night :
A feast for promised triumph yet to come,
When he shall drag the fetter'd Rovers home ;
This hath he sworn by Alla and his sword, 610
And faithful to his firman and his word,
His summon'd prows collect along the coast,
And great the gathering crews—and loud the boast—
Already shared the captives and the prize,
Though far the distant foe they thus despise.

'Tis but to sail—no doubt to-morrow's Sun
Will see the Pirates bound—their haven won!
Mean time the watch may slumber, if they will,
Nor only wake to war, but dreaming kill:
Though all, who can, disperse on shore and seek 620
To flesh their glowing valour on the Greek;
How well such deed becomes the turban'd brave—
To bare the sabre's edge before a slave!
Infest his dwelling—but forbear to slay,
Their arms are strong, yet merciful to-day,
And do not deign to smite because they may!
Unless some gay caprice suggests the blow,
To keep in practice for the coming foe.
Revel and rout the evening hours beguile,
And they who wish to wear a head must smile; 630
For Moslem mouths produce their choicest cheer,
And hoard their curses, till the coast is clear.

II.

High in his hall reclines the turban'd Seyd:
Around—the bearded chiefs he came to lead.
Removed the banquet, and the last pilaff—
Forbidden draughts, 'tis said, he dared to quaff,

Though to the rest the sober berry's juice,³
The slaves bear round for rigid Moslem's use;
The long Chibouque's⁴ dissolving cloud supply,
While dance the Almas⁵ to wild minstrelsy : 640
The rising morn will view the chiefs embark ;
But waves are somewhat treacherous in the dark ;
And revellers may more securely sleep
On silken-couch than o'er the rugged deep ;
Feast there who can—nor combat till they must,
And less to conquest than to Korans trust ;
And yet the numbers crowded in his host
Might warrant more than even the Pacha's boast.

III.

With cautious reverence from the outer gate,
Slow stalks the slave, whose office there to wait, 650
Bows his bent head—his hand salutes the floor,
Ere yet his tongue the trusted tidings bore :
“ A captive Dervise, from the pirate's nest
“ Escaped, is here—himself would tell the rest.”
He took the sign from Seyd's assenting eye,
And led the holy man in silence nigh.

His arms were folded on his dark-green vest,
 His step was feeble, and his look deprest;
 Yet worn he seem'd of hardship more than years,
 And pale his cheek with penance, not from fears, 660
 Vow'd to his God—his sable locks he wore,
 And these his lofty cap rose proudly o'er:
 Around his form his loose long robe was thrown,
 And wrapt a breast bestow'd on heaven alone;
 Submissive, yet with self-possession mann'd,
 He calmly met the curious eyes that scann'd;
 And question of his coming fain would seek,
 Before the Pacha's will allowed to speak.

IV.

“Whence com'st thou, Dervise?”

“From the outlaw's den, 670

“A fugitive—”

“Thy capture where and when?”

“From Scalanova's port to Scio's isle,

“The Saick was bound; but Alla did not smile

“Upon our course—the Moslem merchant's gains

“The Rovers won: our limbs have worn their chains.

“ I had no death to fear, nor wealth to boast,
“ Beyond the wandering freedom which I lost;
“ At length a fisher’s humble boat by night
“ Afforded hope, and offer’d chance of flight:
“ I seized the hour, and find my safety here— 680
“ With thee—most mighty Pacha! who can fear?”
“ How speed the outlaws? stand they well prepared,
“ Their plunder’d wealth, and robber’s rock, to guard?
“ Dream they of this our preparation, doom’d
“ To view with fire their scorpion nest consumed?”
“ Pacha! the fettered captive’s mourning eye
“ That weeps for flight, but ill can play the spy;
“ I only heard the reckless waters roar,
“ Those waves that would not bear me from the shore;
“ I only mark’d the glorious sun and sky, 690
“ Too bright—too blue—for my captivity;
“ And felt—that all which Freedom’s bosom cheers,
“ Must break my chain before it dried my tears.
“ This may’st thou judge, at least, from my escape,
“ They little deem of aught in peril’s shape;

“ Else vainly had I prayed or sought the chance
“ That leads me here—if eyed with vigilance :
“ The careless guard that did not see me fly,
“ May watch as idly when thy power is nigh.
“ Pacha!—my limbs are faint—and nature craves 700
“ Food for my hunger, rest from tossing waves ;
“ Permit my absence—peace be with thee ! Peace
“ With all around !—now grant repose—release.”
“ Stay, Dervise ! I have more to question—stay,
“ I do command thee—sit—dost hear ?—obey !
“ More I must ask, and food the slaves shall bring ;
“ Thou shalt not pine where all are banqueting :
“ The supper done—prepare thee to reply,
“ Clearly and full—I love not mystery.”
“ Twere vain to guess what shook the pious man, 710
Who look’d not lovingly on that Divan ;
Nor show’d high relish for the banquet prest,
And less respect for every fellow guest.
“ Twas but a moment’s peevish hectic past
Along his cheek, and tranquillized as fast :

He sate him down in silence, and his look
Resumed the calmness which before forsook :
The feast was usher'd in—but sumptuous fare
He shunn'd as if some poison mingled there.
For one so long condemn'd to toil and fast, 720
Methinks he strangely spares the rich repast.
“ What ails thee, Dervise? eat—dost thou suppose
“ This feast a Christian's? or my friends thy foes?
“ Why dost thou shun the salt? that sacred pledge,
“ Which, once partaken, blunts the sabre's edge,
“ Makes even contending tribes in peace unite,
“ And hated hosts seem brethren to the sight!”

“ Salt seasons dainties—and my food is still
“ The humblest root, my drink the simplest rill;
“ And my stern vow and order's⁶ laws oppose 730
“ To break or mingle bread with friends or foes;
“ It may seem strange—if there be aught to dread,
“ That peril rests upon my single head;
“ But for thy sway—nay more—thy Sultan's throne,
“ I taste nor bread nor banquet—save alone;

“ Infringed our order’s rule, the Prophet’s rage
“ To Mecca’s dome might bar my pilgrimage.”

“ Well—as thou wilt—ascetic as thou art—
“ One question answer ; then in peace depart.
“ How many?—Ha ! it cannot sure be day ? 740
“ What star—what sun is bursting on the bay ?
“ It shines a lake of fire !—away—away !
“ Ho ! treachery ! my guards ! my scimitar !
“ The galleys feed the flames—and I afar !
“ Accursed Dervise !—these thy tidings—thou
“ Some villain spy—seize—cleave him—slay him now !”

Up rose the Dervise with that burst of light,
Nor less his change of form appall’d the sight :
Up rose that Dervise—not in saintly garb,
But like a warrior bounding from his barb, 750
Dash’d his high cap, and tore his robe away—
Shone his mail’d breast, and flash’d his sabre’s ray !
His close but glittering casque, and sable plume,
More glittering eye, and black brow’s sabler gloom,
Glared on the Moslems’ eyes some Afrit sprite,
Whose demon death-blow left no hope for fight.

The wild confusion, and the swarthy glow
Of flames on high, and torches from below;
The shriek of terror, and the mingling yell—
For swords began to clash, and shouts to swell, 760
Flung o'er that spot of earth the air of hell!
Distracted to and fro the flying slaves
Behold but bloody shore and fiery waves;
Nought heeded they the Pacha's angry cry,
They seize that Dervise!—seize on Zatanai!
He saw their terror—check'd the first despair
That urged him but to stand and perish there,
Since far too early and too well obey'd,
The flame was kindled ere the signal made;
He saw their terror—from his baldric drew 770
His bugle—brief the blast—but shrilly blew,
'Tis answer'd—"Well ye speed, my gallant crew!"
"Why did I doubt their quickness of career?"
"And deem design had left me single here?"
Sweeps his long arm—that sabre's whirling sway,
Sheds fast atonement for its first delay;
Completes his fury, what their fear begun,
And makes the many basely quail to one.

The cloven turbans o'er the chamber spread,
And scarce an arm dare rise to guard its head : 780
Even Seyd, convuls'd, o'erwhelm'd with rage, surprize,
Retreats before him, though he still defies.
No craven he—and yet he dreads the blow,
So much Confusion magnifies his foe !
His blazing galleys still distract his sight,
He tore his beard, and foaming fled the fight ;³
For now the pirates pass'd the Haram gate,
And burst within—and it were death to wait ;
Where wild Amazement shrieking—kneeling—throws
The sword aside—in vain—the blood o'erflows ! 790
The Corsairs pouring, haste to where within,
Invited Conrad's bugle, and the din
Of groaning victims, and wild cries for life,
Proclaim'd how well he did the work of strife.
They shout to find him grim and lonely there,
A glutted tyger mangling in his lair !
But short their greeting—shorter his reply—
“ 'Tis well—but Seyd escapes—and he must die.

“ Much hath been done—but more remains to do—
“ Their galleys blaze—why not their city too?” 800

V.

Quick at the word—they seized him each a torch,
And fire the dome from minaret to porch.
A stern delight was fix'd in Conrad's eye,
But sudden sunk—for on his ear the cry
Of women struck, and like a deadly knell
Knock'd at that heart unmoved by battle's yell.
“ Oh! burst the Haram—wrong not on your lives
“ One female form—remember—we have wives.
“ On them such outrage Vengeance will repay;
“ Man is our foe, and such 'tis ours to slay: 810
“ But still we spared—must spare the weaker prey.
“ Oh! I forgot—but Heaven will not forgive
“ If at my word the helpless cease to live;
“ Follow who will—I go—we yet have time
“ Our souls to lighten of at least a crime.”
He climbs the crackling stair—he bursts the door,
Nor feels his feet glow scorching with the floor;
His breath choak'd gasping with the volumed smoke,
But still from room to room his way he broke:

They search—they find—they save : with lusty arms 820
Each bears a prize of unregarded charms ;
Calm their loud fears ; sustain their sinking frames
With all the care defenceless beauty claims :
So well could Conrad tame their fiercest mood,
And check the very hands with gore imbrued.
But who is she ? whom Conrad's arms convey
From reeking pile and combat's wreck—away—
Who but the love of him he dooms to bleed ?
The Haram queen—but still the slave of Seyd !

VI.

Brief time had Conrad now to greet Gulnare⁹, 830
Few words to reassure the trembling fair ;
For in that pause compassion snatch'd from war,
The foe before retiring, fast and far,
With wonder saw their footsteps unpursued,
First slower fled—then rallied—then withstood,
This Seyd perceives, then first perceives how few,
Compar'd with his, the Corsair's roving crew,
And blushes o'er his error as he eyes
The ruin wrought by panic and surprize.

Alla il Alla ! Vengeance swells the cry— 840
Shame mounts to rage that must atone or die !
And flame for flame and blood for blood must tell,
The tide of triumph ebbs that flowed too well—
When wrath returns to renovated strife,
And those who fought for conquest strike for life.
Conrad beheld the danger—he beheld
His followers faint by freshening foes repelled :
“ One effort—one—to break the circling host ! ”
They form—unite—charge—waver—all is lost !
Within a narrower ring compress'd, beset, 850
Hopeless, not heartless, strive and struggle yet—
Ah ! now they fight in firmest file no more,
Hemm'd in—cut off—cleft down—and trampled o'er ;
But each strikes singly, silently, and home,
And sinks outwearied rather than o'ercome,
His last faint quittance rendering with his breath,
Till the blade glimmers in the grasp of death !

VII.

But first, ere came the rallying host to blows,
And rank to rank, and hand to hand oppose,

Gulnare and all her Haram handmaids freed, 860
Safe in the dome of one who held their creed
By Conrad's mandate safely were bestow'd,
And dried those tears for life and fame that flow'd :
And when that dark-eyed lady, young Gulnare,
Recall'd those thoughts late wandering in despair,
Much did she marvel o'er the courtesy
That smooth'd his accents—soften'd in his eye.
'Twas strange—that robber thus with gore bedew'd,
Seem'd gentler then than Seyd in fondest mood.
The Pacha wooed as if he deem'd the slave 870
Must seem delighted with the heart he gave ;
The Corsair vowed protection, sooth'd affright,
As if his homage were a woman's right.
“ The wish is wrong—nay worse for female—vain :
“ Yet much I long to view that chief again ;
“ If but to thank for, what my fear forgot,
“ The life—my loving lord remembered not !”

VIII.

And him she saw, where thickest carnage spread,
But gathered breathing from the happier dead ;

Far from his band, and battling with a host 880
That deem right dearly won the field he lost,
Fell'd—bleeding—baffled of the death he sought,
And snatch'd to expiate all the ills he wrought;
Preserved to linger and to live in vain,
While Vengeance ponder'd o'er new plans of pain,
And staunch'd the blood she saves to shed again—
But drop by drop, for Seyd's unglutted eye
Would doom him ever dying—ne'er to die!
Can this be he? triumphant late she saw,
When his red hand's wild gesture waved, a law! 890
'Tis he indeed—disarm'd but undeprest,
His sole regret the life he still possest;
His wounds too slight, though taken with that will,
Which would have kiss'd the hand that then could kill.
Oh were there none, of all the many given,
To send his soul—he scarcely asked to heaven?
Must he alone of all retain his breath,
Who more than all had striv'n and struck for death?
He deeply felt—what mortal hearts must feel,
When thus revers'd on faithless fortune's wheel, 900

For crimes committed, and the victor's threat
Of lingering tortures to repay the debt --
He deeply, darkly felt ; but evil pride
That led to perpetrate—now serves to hide.
Still in his stern and self-collected mien
A conqueror's more than captive's air is seen,
Though faint with wasting toil and stiffening wound,
But few that saw—so calmly gaz'd around :
Though the far shouting of the distant crowd,
Their tremors o'er, rose insolently loud, 910
The better warriors who beheld him near,
Insulted not the foe who taught them fear—
And the grim guards that to his durance led,
In silence eyed him with a secret dread.

IX.

The Leech was sent—but not in mercy—there
To note how much the life yet left could bear ;
He found enough to load with heaviest chain,
And promise feeling for the wrench of pain :
To-morrow—yea—to-morrow's evening sun
Will sinking see impalement's pangs begun, 920

And rising with the wonted blush of morn
Behold how well or ill those pangs are borne.
Of torments this the longest and the worst,
Which adds all other agony to thirst,
That day by day death still forbears to slake,
While famish'd vultures flit around the stake.
"Oh! water—water!"—smiling Hate denies
The victim's prayer—for if he drinks—he dies.
This was his doom:—the Leech, the guard were gone,
And left proud Conrad fetter'd and alone. 930

'Twere vain to paint to what his feelings grew—
It even were doubtful if their victim knew.
There is a war, a chaos of the mind,
When all its elements convuls'd—combined—
Lie dark and jarring with perturbed force,
And gnashing with impenitent Remorse;
That juggling fiend—who never spake before—
But cries, "I warn'd thee!" when the deed is o'er.
Vain voice! the spirit burning but unbent,
May writhe—rebel—the weak alone repent! 940

Even in that lonely hour when most it feels,
And to itself all—all that self reveals,
No single passion, and no ruling thought
That leaves the rest as once unseen, unsought,
But the wild prospect when the soul reviews—
All rushing through their thousand avenues—
Ambition's dreams expiring, love's regret,
Endanger'd glory, life itself beset;
The joy untasted, the contempt or hate
Gainst those who fain would triumph in our fate; 950
The hopeless past—the hasting future driven
Too quickly on to guess if hell or heaven;
Deeds, thoughts, and words, perhaps remembered not
So keenly till that hour, but ne'er forgot;
Things light or lovely in their acted time,
But now to stern reflection each a crime;
The withering sense of evil unreveal'd,
Not cankering less because the more conceal'd—
All—in a word—from which all eyes must start,
That opening sepulchre—the naked heart 960
Bares with its buried woes, till Pride awake,
To snatch the mirror from the soul—and break.

Ay—Pride can veil, and Courage brave it all—
 All—all—before—beyond—the deadliest fall :
 Each hath some fear, and he who least betrays,
 The only hypocrite deserving praise :
 Not the loud recreant wretch who boasts and flies ;
 But he who looks on death—and silent dies :
 So steel'd by pondering o'er his far career,
 He halfway meets him should he menace near ! 970

XI.

In the high chamber of his highest tower,
 Sate Conrad, fetter'd in the Pacha's power.
 His palace perish'd in the flame—this fort
 Contain'd at once his captive and his court.
 Not much could Conrad of his sentence blame,
 His foe, if vanquish'd, had but shared the same :—
 Alone he sate—in solitude had scann'd
 His guilty bosom, but that breast he mann'd :
 One thought alone he could not—dared not meet—
 “ Oh, how these tidings will Medora greet ? ” 980
 Then—only then—his clanking hands he rais'd,
 And strain'd with rage the chain on which he gazed :

But soon he found—or feign'd—or dream'd relief,
And smil'd in self-derision of his grief,
“And now come torture when it will—or may—
“More need of rest to nerve me for the day!”
This said, with languor to his mat he crept,
And, whatsoe'er his visions, quickly slept.

'Twas hardly midnight when that fray begun,
For Conrad's plans matured, at once were done; 990
And Havoc loathes so much the waste of time,
She scarce had left an uncommitted crime.
One hour beheld him since the tide he stemm'd—
Disguis'd—discover'd—conquering—ta'en—condemn'd—
A chief on land—an outlaw on the deep—
Destroying—saving—prison'd—and asleep!

XII.

He slept in calmest seeming—for his breath
Was hush'd so deep—Ah! happy if in death!
He slept—Who o'er his placid slumber bends?
His foes are gone—and here he hath no friends; 1000
Is it some seraph sent to grant him grace?
No, 'tis an earthly form with heavenly face!

Its white arm rais'd a lamp—yet gently hid,
Lest the ray flash abruptly on the lid
Of that clos'd eye, which opens but to pain,
And once unclosed—but once may close again.
That form, with eye so dark, and cheek so fair,
And auburn waves of gemm'd and braided hair;
With shape of fairy lightness—naked foot,
That shines like snow, and falls on earth as mute— 1010
Through guards and dunnest night how came it there?
Ah! rather ask what will not woman dare?
Whom youth and pity lead like thee, Gulnare!
She could not sleep—and while the Pacha's rest
In muttering dreams yet saw his pirate-guest,
She left his side—his signet ring she bore,
Which oft in sport adorn'd her hand before—
And with it, scarcely question'd, won her way
Through drowsy guards that must that sign obey.
Worn out with toil, and tir'd with changing blows, 1020
Their eyes had envied Conrad his repose;
And chill and nodding at the turret door,
They stretch their listless limbs, and watch no more—
Just raised their heads to hail the signet-ring,
Nor ask or what or who the sign may bring.

XIII.

She gazed in wonder, "can he calmly sleep,

"While other eyes his fall or ravage weep?

"And mine in restlessness are wandering here—

"What sudden spell hath made this man so dear?

"True—'tis to him my life, and more, I owe, 1030

"And me and mine he spared from worse than woe:

"'Tis late to think—but soft—his slumber breaks—

"How heavily he sighs!—he starts—awakes!"

He rais'd his head—and dazzled with the light,

His eye seem'd dubious if it saw aright:

He moved his hand—the grating of his chain

Too harshly told him that he liv'd again.

"What is that form? if not a shape of air,

"Methinks, my jailor's face shows wond'rous fair!"

"Pirate! thou know'st me not—but I am one, 1040

"Grateful for deeds thou hast too rarely done;

"Look on me—and remember her, thy hand

"Snatch'd from the flames, and thy more fearful band.

“ I come through darkness—and I scarce know why—

“ Yet not to hurt—I would not see thee die.”

“ If so, kind lady! thine the only eye

“ That would not here in that gay hope delight :

“ Theirs is the chance—and let them use their right.

“ But still I thank their courtesy or thine,

“ That would confess me at so fair a shrine!” 1050

Strange though it seem—yet with extremest grief

Is link'd a mirth—it doth not bring relief—

That playfulness of Sorrow ne'er beguiles,

And smiles in bitterness—but still it smiles—

And sometimes with the wisest and the best,

Till even the scaffold¹⁰ echoes with their jest!

Yet not the joy to which it seems akin—

It may deceive all hearts, save that within.

Whate'er it was that flash'd on Conrad, now

A laughing wildness half unbent his brow : 1060

And these his accents had a sound of mirth,

As if the last he could enjoy on earth ;

Yet 'gainst his nature—for through that short life,
Few thoughts had he to spare from gloom and strife.

XIV.

“ Corsair! thy doom is named—but I have power
“ To soothe the Pacha in his weaker hour.
“ Thee would I spare—nay more—would save thee now,
“ But this—time—hope—nor even thy strength allow;
“ But all I can, I will : at least, delay
“ The sentence that remits thee scarce a day. 1070
“ More now were ruin—even thyself were loth
“ The vain attempt should bring but doom to both.”
“ Yes!—loth indeed :—my soul is nerv'd to all,
“ Or fall'n too low to fear a further fall:
“ Tempt not thyself with peril—me with hope,
“ Of flight from foes with whom I could not cope;
“ Unfit to vanquish—shall I meanly fly,
“ The one of all my band that would not die?—
“ Yet there is one—to whom my memory clings,
“ 'Till to these eyes her own wild softness springs. 1080

“ My sole resources in the path I trod

“ Were these—my bark—my sword—my love—my God!

“ The last I left in youth—he leaves me now—

“ And Man but works his will to lay me low.

“ I have no thought to mock his throne with prayer

“ Wrung from the coward crouching of despair,

“ It is enough—I breathe—and I can bear.

“ My sword is shaken from the worthless hand

“ That might have better kept so true a brand;

“ My bark is sunk or captive—but my love— 1090

“ For her in sooth my voice would mount above:

“ Oh! she is all that still to earth can bind—

“ And this will break a heart so more than kind,

“ And blight a form—till thine appeared, Gulnare!

“ Mine eye ne’er ask’d if others were as fair?”

“ Thou lov’st another then?—but what to me

“ Is this—’tis nothing—nothing e’er can be:

“ But yet—thou lov’st—and—Oh! I envy those “ Whose hearts on hearts as faithful can repose,

“ Who never feel the void—the wandering thought 1100

“ That sighs o’er visions—such as mine hath wrought.”

“ Lady—methought thy love was his, for whom
“ This arm redeem’d thee from a fiery tomb.”

“ My love stern Seyd’s? Oh—No—No—not my love—
“ Yet much this heart, that strives no more, once strove
“ To meet his passion—but it would not be.

“ I felt—I feel—love dwells with—with the free.

“ I am a slave, a favoured slave at best,

“ To share his splendour, and seem very blest!

“ Oft must my soul the question undergo, 1110

“ Of—‘ Dost thou love?’ and burn to answer ‘ No!’

“ Oh! hard it is that fondness to sustain,

“ And struggle not to feel averse in vain;

“ But harder still the heart’s recoil to bear,

“ And hide from one—perhaps another there.

“ He takes the hand I give not—nor withhold—

“ Its pulse nor check’d—nor quicken’d—calmly cold:

“ And when resign’d—it drops a lifeless weight

“ From one I never loved enough to hate.

“ No warmth these lips return by his imprest, 1120

“ And chill’d remembrance shudders o’er the rest.

“ Yes—had I ever proved that passion’s zeal,
 “ The change to hatred were at least to feel :
 “ But still—he goes unmourn’d—returns unsought—
 “ And oft when present—absent from my thought.
 “ Or when reflection comes, and come it must—
 “ I fear that henceforth ’twill but bring disgust;
 “ I am his slave—but, in despite of pride,
 “ ’Twere worse than bondage to become his bride.
 “ Oh! that this dotage of his breast would cease! 1130
 “ Or seek another and give mine release,
 “ But yesterday—I could have said, to peace!
 “ Yes—if unwonted fondness now I feign,
 “ Remember—captive ! ’tis to break thy chain.
 “ Repay the life that to thy hand I owe;
 “ To give thee back to all endear’d below,
 “ Who share such love as I can never know.
 “ Farewell—morn breaks—and I must now away :
 “ ’Twill cost me dear—but dread no death to-day!

XV.

She press’d his fetter’d fingers to her heart, 1140
 And bow’d her head, and turn’d her to depart,

And noiseless as a lovely dream is gone.
 And was she here? and is he now alone?
 What gem hath dropp'd and sparkles o'er his chain?
 The tear most sacred—shed for others' pain—
 That starts at once—bright—pure—from Pity's mine,
 Already polish'd by the hand divine!

Oh! too convincing—dangerously dear—
 In woman's eye the unanswerable tear!
 That weapon of her weakness she can wield, 1150
 To save—subdue—at once her spear and shield—
 Avoid it—Virtue ebbs and Wisdom errs,
 Too fondly gazing on that grief of hers!
 What lost a world, and bade a hero fly?
 The timid tear in Cleopatra's eye.
 Yet be the soft triumvir's fault forgiven,
 By this—how many lose not earth—but heaven!
 Consign their souls to man's eternal foe,
 And seal their own to spare some wanton's woe!

XVI.

'Tis morn—and o'er his alter'd features play 1160
 The beams—without the hope of yesterday.—

What shall he be ere night? perchance a thing
O'er which the raven flaps her funeral wing:
By his closed eye unheeded and unfelt,
While sets that sun, and dews of evening melt,
Chill—wet—and misty round each stiffened limb,
Refreshing earth—reviving all but him!—

END OF CANTO II.

CANTO III.

“Come vedi—ancor non m’abbandona.”

DANTE.

I.

SLOW sinks, more lovely ere his race be run,
Along Morea’s hills the setting sun;
Not as in Northern climes obscurely bright, 1170
But one unclouded blaze of living light!
O’er the hush’d deep the yellow beam he throws,
Gilds the green wave, that trembles as it glows.
On old Ægina’s rock, and Idra’s isle,
The god of gladness sheds his parting smile;
O’er his own regions lingering loves to shine,
Though there his altars are no more divine.

Descending fast the mountain shadows kiss
Thy glorious gulph, unconquer'd Salamis!
Their azure arches through the long expanse 1180
More deeply purpled meet his mellowing glance,
And tenderest tints, along their summits driven,
Mark his gay course and own the hues of heaven;
Till, darkly shaded from the land and deep,
Behind his Delphian cliff he sinks to sleep.

On such an eve, his palest beam he cast,
When—Athens! here thy wisest look'd his last.
How watched thy better sons his farewell ray,
That closed their murder'd sage's¹¹ latest day!
Not yet—not yet—Sol pauses on the hill— 1190
The precious hour of parting lingers still;
But sad his light to agonizing eyes,
And dark the mountain's once delightful dyes:
Gloom o'er the lovely land he seem'd to pour,
The land, where Phœbus never frown'd before,
But ere he sunk below Cithæron's head,
The cup of woe was quaff'd—the spirit fled;

The soul of him who scorn'd to fear or fly—
Who liv'd and died, as none can live or die!

But lo! from high Hymettus to the plain, 1200
The queen of night asserts her silent reign.¹²

No murky vapour, herald of the storm,
Hides her fair face, nor girds her glowing form;
With cornice glimmering as the moon-beams play,
There the white column greets her grateful ray,
And bright around with quivering beams beset
Her emblem sparkles o'er the minaret:

The groves of olive scattered dark and wide
Where meek Cephissus pours his scanty tide,
The cypress saddening by the sacred mosque, 1210

The gleaming turret of the gay Kiosk,¹³
And, dun and sombre 'mid the holy calm,
Near Theseus' fane yon solitary palm,
All tinged with varied hues arrest the eye—
And dull were his that pass'd them heedless by.

Again the Ægean, heard no more afar,
Lulls his chaf'd breast from elemental war;

Again his waves in milder tints unfold
Their long array of sapphire and of gold,
Mixt with the shades of many a distant isle, 1220
That frown—where gentler ocean seems to smile.¹⁴

II.

Not now my theme—why turn my thoughts to thee?
Oh! who can look along thy native sea,
Nor dwell upon thy name, whate'er the tale,
So much its magic must o'er all prevail?
Who that beheld that Sun upon thee set,
Fair Athens! could thine evening face forget?
Not he—whose heart nor time nor distance frees,
Spell-bound within the clustering Cyclades!
Nor seems this homage foreign to his strain, 1230
His Corsair's isle was once thine own domain—
Would that with freedom it were thine again!

III.

The Sun hath sunk—and, darker than the night,
Sinks with its beam upon the beacon height—
Medora's heart—the third day's come and gone—
With it he comes not—sends not—faithless one!
The wind was fair though light—and storms were none,

Last eve Anselmo's bark return'd, and yet
His only tidings that they had not met!
Though wild, as now, far different were the tale 1240
Had Conrad waited for that single sail.

The night-breeze freshens—she that day had past
In watching all that Hope proclaimed a mast;
Sadly she sate—on high—Impatience bore
At last her footsteps to the midnight shore,
And there she wandered heedless of the spray
That dash'd her garments oft, and warn'd away;
She saw not—felt not this—nor dared depart,
Nor deemed it cold—her chill was at her heart;
Till grew such certainty from that suspense— 1250
His very Sight had shock'd from life or sense!

It came at last—a sad and shattered boat,
Whose inmates first beheld whom first they sought—
Some bleeding—all most wretched—these the few—
Scarce knew they how escaped—this all they knew.
In silence darkling each appeared to wait
His fellow's mournful guess at Conrad's fate.

Something they would have said; but seemed to fear
To trust their accents to Medora's ear.

She saw at once, yet sunk not—trembled not— 1260

Beneath that grief—that loneliness of lot—

Within that meek fair form were feelings high,

That deem'd not till they found their energy.

While yet was Hope—they soften'd—flutter'd—wept—

All lost—that softness died not—but it slept—

And o'er its slumber rose that Strength which said,

“With nothing left to love—there's nought to dread.”

’Tis more than nature's; like the burning might

Delirium gathers from the fever's height.

“Silent you stand—nor would I hear you tell 1270

“What—speak not—breathe not—for I know it well—

“Yet would I ask—almost my lip denies

“The—quick your answer—tell me where he lies?”

“Lady! we know not—scarce with life we fled;

“But here is one denies that he is dead:

“He saw him bound; and bleeding—but alive.”

She heard no further—’twas in vain to strive—

So throb'd each vein—each thought—till then withstood;
Her own dark soul—these words at once subdued—
She totters—falls—and senseless had the wave 1280
Perchance but snatch'd her from another grave;
But that with hands though rude, yet weeping eyes,
They yield such aid as Pity's haste supplies:
Dash o'er her deathlike cheek the ocean dew,
Raise—fan—sustain—till life returns anew;
Awake her handmaids—with the matrons leave
That fainting form o'er which they gaze and grieve;
Then seek Anselmo's cavern to report
The tale too tedious—when the triumph short.

IV.

In that wild council words wax'd warm and strange, 1290
With thoughts of ransom, rescue, and revenge;
All, save repose or flight—still lingering there
Breathed Conrad's spirit, and forbade despair;
Whate'er his fate—the breasts he form'd and led,
Will save him living, or appease him dead.
Woe to his foes! there yet survive a few,
Whose deeds are daring, as their hearts are true.

V.

Within the Haram's secret chamber sate
 Stern Seyd, still pondering o'er his Captive's fate ;
 His thoughts on love and hate alternate dwell, 1300
 Now with Gulnare, and now in Conrad's cell ;
 Here at his feet the lovely slave reclined
 Surveys his brow—would soothe his gloom of mind,
 While many an anxious glance her large dark eye
 Sends in its idle search for sympathy,
 His only bends in seeming o'er his beads,¹⁵
 But inly views his victim as he bleeds.

“ Pacha ! the day is thine ; and on thy crest

“ Sits Triumph—Conrad taken—fall'n the rest !

“ His doom is fix'd—he dies—and well his fate 1310

“ Was earn'd—yet much too worthless for thy hate :

“ Methinks—a short release, for ransom told

“ With all his treasure, not unwisely sold ;

“ Report speaks largely of his pirate-hoard—

“ Would that of this my Pacha were the Lord !

- “ While baffled—weakened by this fatal fray—
“ Watch’d—followed—he were then an easier prey ;
“ But once cut off—the remnant of his band
“ Embark their wealth, and seek a safer strand.”
- “ Gulnare !—if for each drop of blood a gem 1320
“ Were offered rich as Stamboul’s diadem ;
“ If for each hair of his a massy mine
“ Of virgin ore should supplicating shine ;
“ If all our Arab tales divulge or dream
“ Of wealth were here—that gold should not redeem !
“ It had not now redeem’d a single hour—
“ But that I know him fetter’d, in my power ;
“ And, thirsting for revenge, I ponder still
“ On pangs that longest rack—and latest kill.”
- “ Nay, Seyd !—I seek not to restrain thy rage, 1330
“ Too justly moved for mercy to assuage ;
“ My thoughts were only to secure for thee
“ His riches—thus released, he were not free :
“ Disabled, shorn of half his might and band,
“ His capture could but wait thy first command.”

- “ His capture could !—and shall I then resign
“ One day to him—the wretch already mine ?
“ Release my foe !—at whose remonstrance ?—thine !
“ Fair suitor !—to thy virtuous gratitude,
“ That thus repays this Giaour’s relenting mood, 1340
“ Which thee and thine alone of all could spare,
“ No doubt—regardless if the prize were fair,
“ My thanks and praise alike are due—now hear !
“ I have a counsel for thy gentler ear :
“ I do mistrust thee, woman ! and each word
“ Of thine stamps truth on all Suspicion heard.
“ Borne in his arms through fire from yon Serai—
“ Say, wert thou lingering there with him to fly ?
“ Thou need’st not answer—thy confession speaks,
“ Already reddening on thy guilty cheeks ; 1350
“ Then, lovely dame, bethink thee ! and beware :
“ ’Tis not his life alone may claim such care !
“ Another word and—nay—I need no more.
“ Accursed was the moment when he bore
“ Thee from the flames, which better far—but—no—
“ I then had mourn’d thee with a lover’s woe—
“ Now ’tis thy lord that warns—deceitful thing !
“ Know’st thou that I can clip thy wanton wing ?

“ In words alone I am not wont to chafe :

“ Look to thyself—nor deem thy falsehood safe !” 1360

He rose—and slowly, sternly thence withdrew,

Rage in his eye and threats in his adieu :

Ah ! little reck’d that chief of womanhood—

Which frowns ne’er quell’d, nor menaces subdued ;

And little deem’d he what thy heart—Gulnare !

When soft could feel, and when incens’d could dare.

His doubts appear’d to wrong—nor yet she knew

How deep the root from whence compassion grew—

She was a slave—from such may captives claim

A fellow-feeling—differing but in name ; 1370

Still half unconscious—heedless of his wrath,

Again she ventured on the dangerous path,

Again his rage repell’d—until arose

That strife of thought—the source of woman’s woes !

VI.

Meanwhile—long anxious—weary—still—the same

Roll’d day and night—his soul could terror tame—

This fearful interval of doubt and dread,

When every hour might doom him worse than dead,

When every step that echoed by the gate,
Might entering lead where axe and stake await; 1380
When every voice that grated on his ear
Might be the last that he could ever hear;
Could terror tame—that spirit stern and high
Had proved unwilling as unfit to die;
'Twas worn—perhaps decayed—yet silent bore
That conflict deadlier far than all before:
The heat of fight, the hurry of the gale,
Leave scarce one thought inert enough to quail;
But bound and fix'd in fettered solitude,
To pine, the prey of every changing mood; 1390
To gaze on thine own heart—and meditate
Irrevocable faults—and coming fate—
Too late the last to shun—the first to mend—
To count the hours that struggle to thine end,
With not a friend to animate and tell
To other ears that death became thee well;
Around thee foes to forge the ready lie,
And blot life's latest scene with calumny:
Before thee tortures, which the soul can dare,
Yet doubts how well the shrinking flesh may bear; 1400

But deeply feels a single cry would shame,
To valour's praise thy last and dearest claim ;
The life thou leav'st below—denied above
By kind monopolists of heavenly love,
And more than doubtful paradise—thy heaven
Of earthly hope—thy loved one from thee riven.
Such were the thoughts that outlaw must sustain,
And govern pangs surpassing mortal pain :
And those sustain'd he—boots it well or ill ?
Since not to sink beneath, is something still ! 1410

VII.

The first day pass'd—he saw not her—Gulnare—
The second—third—and still she came not there ;
But what her words avouch'd, her charms had done,
Or else he had not seen another sun.
The fourth day roll'd along—and with the night
Came storm and darkness in their mingling might :
Oh ! how he listen'd to the rushing deep,
That ne'er till now so broke upon his sleep ;
And his wild spirit wilder wishes sent,
Roused by the roar of his own element ! 1420

Oft had he ridden on that winged wave,
And loved its roughness for the speed it gave;
And now its dashing echoed on his ear,
A long known voice—alas! too vainly near!
Loud sung the wind above—and, doubly loud,
Shook o'er his turret cell the thunder-cloud;
And flash'd the lightning by the latticed bar,
To him more genial than the midnight star:
Close to the glimmering grate he dragg'd his chain,
And hoped that peril might not prove in vain. 1430
He raised his iron hand to Heaven, and prayed
One pitying flash to mar the form it made:
His steel and impious prayer attract alike—
The storm roll'd onward and disdain'd to strike;
Its peal waxed fainter—ceased—he felt alone,
As if some faithless friend had spurn'd his groan!

VIII.

The midnight pass'd—and to the massy door,
A light step came—it paused—it moved once more;
Slow turns the grating bolt and sullen key—
'Tis as his heart foreboded—that fair she! 1440

Whate'er her sins—to him a guardian saint,
And beauteous still as hermit's hope can paint;
Yet changed since last within that cell she came,
More pale her cheek—more tremulous her frame:
On him she cast her dark and hurried eye,
Which spoke before her accents—"thou must die!—"
"Yes, thou must die—there is but one resource,
"The last—the worst—if torture were not worse."

"Lady! I look to none—my lips proclaim 1449

"What last proclaim'd they—Conrad still the same:

"Why should'st thou seek an outlaw's life to spare,

"And change the sentence I deserve to bear?

"Well have I earn'd—nor here alone—the meed

"Of Seyd's revenge, by many a lawless deed."

"Why should I seek? because—Oh! didst thou not

"Redeem my life from worse than slavery's lot?

"Why should I seek?—hath misery made thee blind

"To the fond workings of a woman's mind!

"And must I say? albeit my heart rebel

"With all that woman feels, but should not tell— 1460

“ Because—despite thy crimes—that heart is moved—

“ It fear’d thee—thank’d thee—pitied—madden’d—loved.

“ Reply not—tell not now thy tale again,

“ Thou lov’st another—and I love in vain ;

“ Though fond as mine her bosom, form more fair,

“ I rush through peril which she would not dare.

“ If that thy heart to hers were truly dear,

“ Were I thine own—thou wert not lonely here—

“ An outlaw’s spouse—and leave her lord to roam !

“ What hath such gentle dame to do with home ? 1470

“ But speak not now—o’er thine and o’er my head

“ Hangs the keen sabre by a single thread ;

“ If thou hast courage still, and would’st be free,

“ Receive this poignard—rise—and follow me !”

“ Ay—in my chains ! my steps will gently tread,

“ With these adornments, o’er each slumbering head !

“ Thou hast forgot—is this a garb for flight ?

“ Or is that instrument more fit for fight ?”

“ Misdoubting Corsair ! I have gain’d the guard,

“ Ripe for revolt, and greedy for reward. 1480

- “ A single word of mine removes that chain :
“ Without some aid how here could I remain ?
“ Well, since we met, hath sped my busy time,
“ If in aught evil, for thy sake the crime :
“ The crime—’tis none to punish those of Seyd—
“ That hated tyrant, Conrad—he must bleed !
“ I see thee shudder—but my soul is changed—
“ Wrong’d—spurn’d—reviled—and it shall be avenged—
“ Accus’d of what till now my heart disdain’d—
“ Too faithful, though to bitter bondage chain’d. 1490
“ Yes, smile !—but he had little cause to sneer,
“ I was not treacherous then—nor thou too dear—
“ But he has said it—and the jealous well,
“ Those tyrants, teasing, tempting to rebel,
“ Deserve the fate their fretting lips foretell.
“ I never loved—he bought me—somewhat high—
“ Since with me came a heart he could not buy.
“ I was a slave unmurmuring ; he hath said,
“ But for his rescue I with thee had fled.
“ ’Twas false thou know’st—but let such augurs rue, 1500
“ Their words are omens, Insult renders true.
“ Nor was thy respite granted to my prayer ;
“ This fleeting grace was only to prepare
“ New torments for thy life, and my despair.

- “ Mine too he threatens ; but his dotage still “ Would fain reserve me for his lordly will :
“ When wearier of these fleeting charms and me,
“ There yawns the sack—and yonder rolls the sea !
“ What, am I then a toy for dotard’s play,
“ To wear but till the gilding frets away ? 1510
“ I saw thee—loved thee—owe thee all—would save,
“ If but to shew how grateful is a slave.
“ But had he not thus menaced fame and life,
“ (And well he keeps his oaths pronounced in strife)
“ I still had saved thee—but the Pacha spared.
“ Now I am all thine own—for all prepared—
“ Thou lov’st me not—nor know’st—or but the worst.
“ Alas ! this love—that hatred are the first—
“ Oh ! could’st thou prove my truth, thou would’st not start,
“ Nor fear the fire that lights an Eastern heart, 1520
“ ’Tis now the beacon of thy safety—now
“ It points within the port a Mainote prow :
“ But in one chamber, where our path must lead,
“ There sleeps—he must not wake—the oppressor Seyd !”
“ Gulnare—Gulnare—I never felt till now
“ My abject fortune—withered fame so low :

- “ Seyd is mine enemy : had swept my band
“ From earth with ruthless but with open hand,
“ And therefore came I, in my bark of war,
“ To smite the smiter with the scimitar ; 1530
“ Such is my weapon—not the secret knife—
“ Who spares a woman’s seeks not slumber’s life—
“ Thine saved I gladly, Lady, not for this—
“ Let me not deem that mercy shewn amiss.
“ Now fare thee well—more peace be with thy breast!
“ Night wears apace—my last of earthly rest!”
- “ Rest! Rest! by sunrise must thy sinews shake,
“ And thy limbs writhe around the ready stake.
“ I heard the order—saw—I will not see—
“ If thou wilt perish, I will fall with thee. 1540
“ My life—my love—my hatred—all below
“ Are on this cast—Corsair! ’tis but a blow!
“ Without it flight were idle—how evade
“ His sure pursuit? my wrongs too unrepaid,
“ My youth disgraced—the long—long wasted years,
“ One blow shall cancel with our future fears;
“ But since the dagger suits thee less than brand,
“ I’ll try the firmness of a female hand—

- “ Mine too he threatens ; but his dotage still

IX.

She turn’d, and vanish’d ere he could reply,
But his glance followed far with eager eye;
And gathering, as he could, the links that bound
His form, to curl their length, and curb their sound,
Since bar and bolt no more his steps preclude,
He, fast as fettered limbs allow, pursued.
’Twas dark and winding, and he knew not where
That passage led—nor lamp nor guard were there : 1560
He sees a dusky glimmering—shall he seek
Or shun that ray so indistinct and weak ?
Chance guides his steps—a freshness seems to bear
Full on his brow, as if from morning air—
He reached an open gallery—on his eye
Gleam’d the last star of night—the clearing sky—
Yet scarcely heeded these—another light
From a lone chamber struck upon his sight.

Towards it he moved, a scarcely closing door
Reveal'd the ray within, but nothing more. 1570
With hasty step a figure outward past,
Then paused—and turn'd—and paused—'tis She at last!
No poignard in that hand—nor sign of ill—
“Thanks to that softening heart—she could not kill!”
Again he looked, the wildness of her eye
Starts from the day abrupt and fearfully.
She stopp'd—threw back her dark far-floating hair,
That nearly veil'd her face and bosom fair:
As if she late had bent her leaning head
Above some object of her doubt or dread. 1580
They meet—upon her brow—unknown—forgot—
Her hurrying hand had left—'twas but a spot—
Its hue was all he saw—and scarce withstood—
Oh! slight but certain pledge of crime—'tis blood!

X.

He had seen battle—he had brooded lone
O'er promised pangs to sentenced guilt foreshown—
He had been tempted—chastened—and the chain
Yet on his arms might ever there remain—

But ne'er from strife—captivity—remorse—
 From all his feelings in their inmost force— 1590
 So thrill'd—so shuddered every creeping vein
 As now they froze before that purple stain.
 That spot of blood, that light but guilty streak,
 Had banish'd all the beauty from her cheek!
 Blood he had viewed—could view unmoved—but then
 It flow'd in combat, or was shed by men!

XI.

“ 'Tis done—he nearly waked—but it is done—
 “ Corsair! he perish'd—thou art dearly won.
 “ All words would now be vain—away—away!
 “ Our bark is tossing—'tis already day— 1600
 “ The few gain'd over, now are wholly mine,
 “ And these thy yet surviving band shall join:
 “ Anon my voice shall vindicate my hand,
 “ When once our sail forsakes this hated strand.”

XII.

She clapp'd her hands—and through the gallery pour,
 Equipp'd for flight, her vassals—Greek and Moor;

Silent but quick they stoop, his chains unbind;
Once more his limbs are free as mountain wind!
But on his heavy heart such sadness sate,
As if they there transferr'd that iron weight— 1610
No words are uttered—at her sign, a door
Reveals the secret passage to the shore;
The city lies behind—they speed, they reach
The glad waves dancing on the yellow beach;
And Conrad following, at her beck, obey'd,
Nor cared he now if rescued or betray'd;
Resistance were as useless as if Seyd
Yet lived to view the doom his ire decreed.

XIII.

Embark'd, the sail unfurl'd, the light breeze blew—
How much had Conrad's memory to review! 1620
Sunk he in contemplation—till the cape
Where last he anchor'd rear'd its giant shape.
Ah!—since that fatal night, though brief the time,
Had swept an age of terror, grief, and crime.
As its far shadow frown'd above the mast,
He veil'd his face, and sorrowed as he past;
He thought of all—Gonsalvo and his band,
His fleeting triumph and his failing hand;

He thought on her afar, his lonely bride—
He turned and saw—Gulnare, the homicide! 1630

XIV.

She watch'd his features till she could not bear
Their freezing aspect and averted air,
And that strange fierceness foreign to her eye,
Fell quench'd in tears, too late to shed or dry.
She knelt beside him and his hand she prest,
“Thou may'st forgive though Alla's self detest;
“But for that deed of darkness what wert thou?
“Reproach me—but not yet—Oh! spare me now!
“I am not what I seem—this fearful night
“My brain bewilder'd—do not madden quite! 1640
“If I had never loved—though less my guilt,
“Thou hadst not lived to—hate me—if thou wilt.”

XV.

She wrongs his thoughts, they more himself upbraid
Than her, though undesign'd, the wretch he made;
But speechless all, deep, dark, and unexpressed,
They bleed within that silent cell—his breast.

Still onward, fair the breeze, nor rough the surge,
The blue waves sport around the stern they urge;
Far on the horizon's verge appears a speck—
A spot—a mast—a sail—an armed deck! 1650
Their little bark her men of watch descry,
And ampler canvas woos the wind from high;
She bears her down majestically near,
Speed on her prow, and terror in her tier;
A flash is seen—the ball beyond their bow
Booms harmless hissing to the deep below.
Uprose keen Conrad from his silent trance,
A long, long absent gladness in his glance;
“ ’Tis mine—my blood-red flag—again—again—
“ I am not all deserted on the main!” 1660
They own the signal, answer to the hail,
Hoist out the boat at once, and slacken sail.
“ ’Tis Conrad!—Conrad!” shouting from the deck,
Command nor duty could their transport check!
With light alacrity and gaze of pride,
They view him mount once more his vessel's side;
A smile relaxing in each rugged face,
Their arms can scarce forbear a rough embrace.

He—half forgetting danger and defeat,
Returns their greeting as a chief may greet, 1670
Wrings with a cordial grasp Anselmo's hand,
And feels he yet can conquer and command!

XVI.

These greetings o'er, the feelings that o'erflow,
Yet grieve to win him back without a blow;
They sail'd prepared for vengeance—had they known :
A woman's hand secured that deed her own,
She were their queen—less scrupulous are they
Than haughty Conrad how they win their way.
With many an asking smile, and wondering stare,
They whisper round, and gaze upon Gulnare; 1680
And her, at once above—beneath her sex,
Whom blood appall'd not, their regards perplex.
To Conrad turns her faint imploring eye,
She drops her veil, and stands in silence by;
Her arms are meekly folded on that breast,
Which—Conrad safe—to fate resign'd the rest.
Though worse than phrenzy could that bosom fill,
Extreme in love or hate—in good or ill,
The worst of crimes had left her woman still!

XVII.

This Conrad mark'd, and felt—ah! could he less: 1690

Hate of that deed—but grief for her distress;

What she had done no tears can wash away,

And heaven must punish on its angry day:

But—it was done—he knew, whate'er her guilt,

For him that poignard smote—that blood was spilt—

And he was free!—and she for him had given

Her all on earth, and more than all in heaven!

And now he turn'd him to that dark-eyed slave

Whose brow was bowed beneath the glance he gave, 1699

Who now seemed changed and humbled:—faint and meek,

But varying oft the colour of her cheek

To deeper shades of paleness—all it's red

That fearful spot which stain'd it from the dead!

He took that hand—it trembled—now too late—

So soft in love—so wildly nerved in hate;

He clasp'd that hand—it trembled—and his own

Had lost it's firmness, and his voice it's tone.

“Gulnare!”—but she replied not—“dear Gulnare!”

She raised her eye—her only answer there—

At once she sought and sunk in his embrace: 1710

If he had driven her from that resting place,

His had been more or less than mortal heart,
But—good or ill—it bade her not depart.
Perchance, but for the bodings of his breast,
His latest virtue then had joined the rest.
Yet even Medora might forgive the kiss
That asked from form so fair no more than this—
The first—the last that Frailty stole from Faith—
To lips where Love had lavish'd all his breath,
To lips—whose broken sighs such fragrance fling, 1720
As he had fann'd them freshly with his wing!

XVIII.

They gain by twilight's hour their lonely isle.
To them the very rocks appear to smile,
The haven hums with many a cheering sound,
The beacons blaze their wonted stations round,
The boats are darting o'er the curly bay,
And sportive dolphins bend them through the spray;
Even the hoarse sea-bird's shrill discordant shriek,
Greets like the welcome of his tuneless beak!
Beneath each lamp that through its lattice gleams, 1730
Their fancy paints the friends that trim the beams.

Oh! what can sanctify the joys of home,
Like Hope's gay glance from Ocean's troubled foam?

XIX.

The lights are high on beacon and from bower,
And midst them Conrad seeks Medora's tower:
He looks in vain—'tis strange—and all remark,
Amid so many, her's alone is dark.
'Tis strange—of yore its welcome never fail'd,
Nor now, perchance, extinguish'd, only veil'd.
With the first boat descends he for the shore, 1740
And looks impatient on the lingering oar.
Oh! for a wing beyond the falcon's flight,
To bear him like an arrow to that height!
With the first pause the resting rowers gave,
He waits not—looks not—leaps into the wave,
Strives through the surge—bestrides the beach—and high
Ascends the path familiar to his eye.

He reach'd his turret door—he paused—no sound
Broke from within—and all was night around.
He knock'd, and loudly—footstep nor reply 1750
Announced that any heard or deem'd him nigh;

His had been more or less than mortal heart,
But—good or ill—it bade her not depart.
Perchance, but for the bodings of his breast,
His latest virtue then had joined the rest.

Announced that any heard or deem'd him nigh;

He knock'd—but faintly—for his trembling hand
Refus'd to aid his heavy heart's demand.
The portal opens—'tis a well known face—
But not the form he panted to embrace.
Its lips are silent—twice his own essay'd,
And fail'd to frame the question they delay'd;
He snatch'd the lamp—its light will answer all—
It quits his grasp—expiring in the fall.
He would not wait for that reviving ray— 1760
As soon could he have lingered there for day;
But, glimmering through the dusky corridore,
Another chequers o'er the shadowed floor;
His steps the chamber gain—his eyes behold
All that his heart believed not—yet foretold!

XX.

He turn'd not—spoke not—sunk not—fix'd his look,
And set the anxious frame that lately shook:
He gazed—how long we gaze despite of pain,
And know—but dare not own we gaze in vain!
In life itself she was so still and fair, 1770
That death with gentler aspect withered there;

And the cold flowers ¹⁶ her colder hand contain'd,
In that last grasp as tenderly were strain'd
As if she scarcely felt, but feign'd a sleep,
And made it almost mockery yet to weep :
The long dark lashes fringed her lids of snow—
And veil'd—thought shrinks from all that lurk'd below—
Oh ! o'er the eye death most exerts his might,
And hurls the spirit from her throne of light !
Sinks those blue orbs in that long last eclipse, 1780
But spares, as yet, the charm around her lips—
Yet—yet they seem as they forbore to smile,
And wish'd repose—but only for a while ;
But the white shroud, and each extended tress,
Long—fair—but spread in utter lifelessness,
Which, late the sport of every summer wind,
Escaped the baffled wreath that strove to bind ;
These—and the pale pure cheek, became the bier—
But she is nothing—wherefore is he here ?

XXI.

He ask'd no question—all were answer'd now 1790
By the first glance on that still—marble brow.
It was enough—she died—what reck'd it how ?

The love of youth, the hope of better years,
The source of softest wishes, tenderest fears,
The only living thing he could not hate,
Was reft at once—and he deserv'd his fate,
But did not feel it less ;—the good explore,
For peace, those realms where guilt can never soar :
The proud—the wayward—who have fixed below
Their joy—and find this earth enough for woe, 1800
Lose in that one their all—perchance a mite—
But who in patience parts with all delight ?
Full many a stoic eye and aspect stern
Mask hearts where grief hath little left to learn ;
And many a withering thought lies hid—not lost—
In smiles that least befit who wear them most.

XXII.

By those, that deepest feel, are ill exprest
The indistinctness of the suffering breast;
Where thousand thoughts begin to end in one,
Which seeks from all the refuge found in none ; 1810
No words suffice the secret soul to show,
And Truth denies all eloquence to Woe.

On Conrad's stricken soul exhaustion prest,
And stupor almost lull'd it into rest ;
So feeble now—his mother's softness crept
To those wild eyes, which like an infant's wept :
It was the very weakness of his brain,
Which thus confess'd without relieving pain.
None saw his trickling tears—perchance, if seen,
That useless flood of grief had never been : 1830
Nor long they flowed—he dried them to depart,
In helpless—hopeless—brokenness of heart :
The sun goes forth—but Conrad's day is dim—
And the night cometh—ne'er to pass from him—
There is no darkness like the cloud of mind,
On Grief's vain eye—the blindest of the blind !
Which may not—dare not see—but turns aside
To blackest shade—nor will endure a guide !

XXIII.

His heart was form'd for softness—warp'd to wrong—
Betray'd too early, and beguil'd too long ; 1830
Each feeling pure—as falls the dropping dew
Within the grot ; like that had harden'd too ;—

Less clear, perchance, its earthly trials pass'd,
But sunk, and chill'd, and petrified at last.
Yet tempests wear, and lightning cleaves the rock;
If such his heart, so shatter'd it the shock.
There grew one flower beneath its rugged brow,
Though dark the shade—it shelter'd,—saved till now.
The thunder came—that bolt hath blasted both,
The Granite's firmness, and the Lily's growth : 1840
The gentle plant hath left no leaf to tell
Its tale, but shrunk and wither'd where it fell,
And of its cold protector, blacken round
But shiver'd fragments on the barren ground!

XXIV.

'Tis morn—to venture on his lonely hour
Few dare—though now Anselmo sought his tower.
He was not there—nor seen along the shore;
Ere night, alarm'd, their isle is traversed o'er:
Another morn—another bids them seek,
And shout his name till echo waxeth weak ; 1850
Mount—grotto—cavern—valley search'd in vain,
They find on shore a sea-boat's broken chain—
Their hope revives—they follow o'er the main.

'Tis idle all—moons roll on moons away,
And Conrad comes not—came not since that day—
Nor trace, nor tidings of his doom declare
Where lives his grief, or perish'd his despair!
Long mourn'd his band whom none could mourn beside;
And fair the monument they gave his bride:
For him they raise not the recording stone— 1860
His death yet dubious, deeds too widely known;
He left a Corsair's name to other times,
Link'd with one virtue, and a thousand crimes.

The idle all-morning roll on moors away
 And Conrad comes not-eating not-sleeping that day
 Nor trace, nor tidings of his absent dearer
 Where lies his grief, or what his dearest
 Long mourned his hand from home, nor would he
 And for the monument they gave his name
 For him they raise not the recording stone
 His death relations, dead too widely known
 He left a Conrad's name to other times
 And with one thing, and a thousand things
 And of his old world, not a word
 Not a word, not a word, not a word

XXIV

The scene is set in the heart of the
 For now the light of day is gone
 He was not there, nor seen along the shore
 Ere night, alone, in the heart of the
 Another, alone, in the heart of the
 And alone, alone, in the heart of the Mount, alone, in the heart of the
 This is the scene, alone, in the heart of the
 This is the scene, alone, in the heart of the

The time in this poem may seem too short for the occurrences, but the whole of the Ægean isles are within a few hours sail of the continent, and the reader must be kind enough to take the wind as I have often found it.

Note to Canto II. page 33, line 18.

It has been objected that Conrad’s entering disguised as a spy is out of Nature.—Perhaps so. I find something not unlike it in history.

“ Anxious to explore with his own eyes the state of the Vandals, Majorian ventured, after disguising the colour of his hair, to visit Carthage in the character of his own ambassador ; and Genseric was afterwards mortified by the discovery, that he had entertained and dismissed the Emperor of the Romans. Such an anecdote may be rejected as an improbable fiction ; but it is a fiction which would not have been imagined unless in the life of a hero." Gibbon, D. and F. Vol. VI. p. 180.

That Conrad is a character not altogether out of nature I shall attempt to prove by some historical coincidences which I have met with since writing "The Corsair."

"Eccelin prisonnier" dit Kolandini, "s'enfermoit dans un silence menacant, il fixoit sur la terre son visage feroce, et ne donnoit point d'essor a sa profonde indignation.—De toutes partes cependant les soldats & les peuples accouroient ; ils vouloient voir cet homme, jadis si puissant, et la joie universelle eclatoit de toutes parts.

* * * * *

"Eccelin etoit d'une petite taille ; mais tout l'aspect de sa personne, tous ses mouvemens indiquoient un soldat.—Son langage etoit amer, son deportment superbe—et par son seul egard, il faisoit trembler les plus hardis." Sismondi, tome III. page 219, 220.

"Gizericus (Genseric, king of the Vandals, the conqueror of both Carthage and Rome,) statura mediocris, et equi casu claudicans, animo profundus, sermone rarus, luxuriæ contemptor, irâ turbidus habendi, cupidus, ad solicitandas gentes providentissimus, &c. &c. Jornandes de Rebus Getius, c. 33.

I beg leave to quote these gloomy realities to keep in countenance my Giaour and Corsair.

A common and not very novel effect of Mussulman anger. See Prince Eugene's Memoirs, page 24. "The Seraskier received a wound in the thigh; he plucked up his beard by the roots, because he was obliged to quit the field."

Note 9, page 42, line 11.

Brief time had Conrad now to greet Gulnare,

Gulnare, a female name; it means, literally, the flower of the Pomegranate.

Till even the scaffold echoes with their jest!

In Sir Thomas More, for instance, on the scaffold, and Anne Boleyn in the Tower, when grasping her neck, she remarked, that it "was too slender to trouble the headsman much." During one part of the French Revolution, it became a fashion to leave some "mot" as a legacy; and the quantity of facetious last words spoken during that period would form a melancholy jest-book of a considerable size.

Note 11, page 62, line 12.

That closed their murder'd sage's latest day!

Socrates drank the hemlock a short time before sunset (the hour of execution), notwithstanding the entreaties of his disciples to wait till the sun went down.

Note 12, page 63, line 4.

The queen of night asserts her silent reign.

The twilight in Greece is much shorter than in our own country; the days in winter are longer, but in summer of shorter duration.

The gleaming turret of the gay Kiosk,

The Kiosk is a Turkish summer-house; the palm is without the present walls of Athens, not far from the temple of Theseus, between which and the tree the wall intervenes.—Cephisus' stream is indeed scanty, and Ilissus has no stream at all.

Note 14, page 64, line 4.

That frown—where gentler ocean seems to smile.

The opening lines as far as section II. have, perhaps, little business here, and were annexed to an unpublished (though printed) poem; but they were written on the spot in the Spring of 1811, and—I scarce know why—the reader must excuse their appearance here if he can.

POEMS.

To a Lady weeping.

WEEP, daughter of a royal line,
A Sire's disgrace, a realm's decay ;
Ah, happy ! if each tear of thine
Could wash a father's fault away !

Weep—for thy tears are Virtue's tears—
Auspicious to these suffering isles ;
And be each drop in future years
Repaid thee by thy people's smiles !

March, 1812.

From the Turkish.

1.

THE chain I gave was fair to view,
The lute I added sweet in sound,
The heart that offered both was true,
And ill deserv'd the fate it found.

These gifts were charm'd by secret spell
Thy truth in absence to divine;
And they have done their duty well,
Alas! they could not teach thee thine.

3.

That chain was firm in every link,
But not to bear a stranger's touch;
That lute was sweet—till thou could'st think
In other hands its notes were such.

Let him, who from thy neck unbound
The chain which shiver'd in his grasp,
Who saw that lute refuse to sound,
Restring the chords, renew the clasp.

5.

When thou wert chang'd, they alter'd too;
The chain is broke, the music mute:
'Tis past—to them and thee adieu—
False heart, frail chain, and silent lute.

SONNET.

To Geneva.

THINE eyes blue tenderness, thy long fair hair,
And the wan lustre of thy features—caught
From contemplation—where serenely wrought,
Seems Sorrow's softness charm'd from its despair—
Have thrown such speaking sadness in thine air,
That—but I know thy blessed bosom fraught
With mines of unalloy'd and stainless thought—
I should have deem'd thee doom'd to earthly care.
With such an aspect by his colours blent,
When from his beauty-breathing pencil born,
(Except that thou hast nothing to repent)
The Magdalen of Guido saw the morn—
Such seem'st thou—but how much more excellent!
With nought Remorse can claim—nor Virtue scorn.

SONNET.

To Geneva.

THY cheek is pale with thought, but not from woe,
And yet so lovely, that if Mirth could flush
Its rose of whiteness with the brightest blush,
My heart would wish away that ruder glow :—
And dazzle not thy deep-blue eyes—but oh !
While gazing on them sterner eyes will gush,
And into mine my mother's weakness rush,
Soft as the last drops round heaven's airy bow ;
For, through thy long dark lashes low depending,
The soul of melancholy Gentleness
Gleams like a seraph from the sky descending,
Above all pain, yet pitying all distress ;
At once such majesty with sweetness blending,
I worship more, but cannot love thee less.

Inscription on the Monument of a Newfoundland Dog.

WHEN some proud son of man returns to earth,
Unknown to glory, but upheld by birth,
The sculptor's art exhausts the pomp of woe,
And storied urns record who rests below ;
When all is done, upon the tomb is seen,
Not what he was, but what he should have been :
But the poor dog, in life the firmest friend,
The first to welcome, foremost to defend,
Whose honest heart is still his master's own,
Who labours, fights, lives, breathes for him alone,
Unhonour'd falls, unnotic'd all his worth,
Denied in heaven the soul he held on earth :
While man, vain insect ! hopes to be forgiven,
And claims himself a sole exclusive heaven.
Oh man ! thou feeble tenant of an hour,
Debas'd by slavery, or corrupt by power,
Who knows thee well must quit thee with disgust,
Degraded mass of animated dust !

Thy love is lust, thy friendship all a cheat,
Thy smiles hypocrisy, thy words deceit !
By nature vile, ennobled but by name,
Each kindred brute might bid thee blush for shame.
Ye! who perchance behold this simple urn,
Pass on—it honours none you wish to mourn :
To mark a friend's remains these stones arise,
I never knew but one, and here he lies.

Newstead Abbey, Oct. 30, 1808.

Farewell.

FAREWELL! if ever fondest prayer
For other's weal availed on high,
Mine will not all be lost in air,
But waft thy name beyond the sky,
'Twere vain to speak, to weep, to sigh:
Oh! more than tears of blood can tell,
When wrung from guilt's expiring eye,
Are in that word—Farewell!—Farewell!

These lips are mute, these eyes are dry;
But in my breast, and in my brain,
Awake the pangs that pass not by,
The thought that ne'er shall sleep again.
My soul nor deigns nor dares complain,
Though grief and passion there rebel;
I only know we loved in vain—
I only feel—Farewell!—Farewell!

THE END.

Vandals, Majorian ventured, after disguising the colour of his hair, to visit Carthage in the character of his own ambassador ; and Genseric was afterwards mortified by the discovery, that he had entertained and dismissed the Emperor of the Romans. Such an anecdote may be rejected as an improbable fiction ; but it is a fiction which would not have been imagined unless in the life of a hero." Gibbon, D. and F. Vol. VI. p. 180.

That Conrad is a character not altogether out of nature I shall attempt to prove by some historical coincidences which I have met with since writing "The Corsair."

"Eccelin prisonnier" dit Kolandini, "s'enfermoit dans un silence menacant, il fixoit sur la terre son visage feroce, et ne donnoit point d'essor a sa profonde indignation.—De toutes partes cependant les soldats & les peuples accouroient ; ils vouloient voir cet homme, jadis si puissant, et la joie universelle eclatoit de toutes parts.

* * * * *

"Eccelin etoit d'une petite taille ; mais tout l'aspect de sa personne, tous ses mouvemens indiquoient un soldat.—Son langage etoit amer, son deportment superbe—et par son seul egard, il faisoit trembler les plus hardis." Sismondi, tome III. page 219, 220.

"Gizericus (Genseric, king of the Vandals, the conqueror of both Carthage and Rome,) statura mediocris, et equi casu clandestini, animo profundus, sermone rarus, luxuriæ contemptor, irâ turbidus habendi, cupidus, ad sollicitandas gentes providentissimus, &c. &c. Jornandes de Rebus Getius, c. 33.
